

It is a Scottish song, used frequently at special occasions and sporting events. It is one of a number of songs which unofficially fulfils the role of national Anthem.

Flower of Scotland (in D)

Written by Roy Williamson (Corries) - 1967

D D D 3/4 time

v1 [D] Oh flower of Scot-land, when will we [A] see yer like a[D]gain,
That [G] fought and [D] died for, yer [A] wee bit [A7] hill and [D] glen,
That [D] stood against him, proud [G] Edward's [D] army,
And [G] sent him [D] home- ward, tae [C] think a[D]gain. [D]

v2 The [D] hills are bare now, and autumn [A] leaves lie thick and [D] still,

For [G] land that is [D] lost now, which [A] those so [A7] dearly [D] held,

That stood against him, proud [G] Edward's [D] army,

And [G] sent him [D] home-ward, tae [C] think a[D]gain. [D] v3 [soft] [D] Those days are past now, and in the [A] past they [A7] must re[D]main,

[more] But [G] we can still [D] rise now, and [A] be the [A7] nation
a[D]gain,

[loud] That stood against him, proud [G] Edward's [D] army,

And [G] sent him [D] home-ward, tae [C] think a[D]gain. [D]

v4 [D] Oh flower of Scot-land, when will we [A] see yer like a[D]gain,

That [G] fought and [D] died for, yer [A] wee bit [A7] hill and [D] glen,

That [D] stood against him, proud [G] Edward's [D] army,

And [G] sent him [D] home- ward, tae [C] think a[D]gain. [D]

V3 & V4: 1st two lines together [D] Those days are past now, and in the [A] past they [A7] must re[D]main,

But [G] we can still [D] rise now, and [A] be the [A7] nation a[D]gain, [D] Oh flower of Scot-land, when will we [A] see yer like a[D]gain,
That [G] fought and [D] died for, yer [A] wee bit [A7] hill and [D] glen,

ALL [D] Oh flower of Scot-land, when will we [A] see yer like a[D]gain,
That [G] fought and [D] died for, yer [A] wee bit [A7] hill and [D] glen,
That [D] stood against him, proud [G] Edward's [D] army,
And [G] sent him [D] home-ward, tae [C] think a[D]gain. <D>
